Why should you join a Credit Union?

Credit unions are member-owned, democratically run not-for profit organizations. Every member has a vote.

Compared to banks, credit unions have a volunteer board of directors where banks have paid shareholders/investors. By paying shareholders banks typically have higher rates, fees and services, where credit unions running as a coop can offer low rates and fees in addition to higher earnings on your money saved.

You can shop around, see what is a right fit for your financial needs, but remember Southwest Montana Community Federal Credit Union is locally owned, operated, community based, and federally insured. Everything we do, we do for you
